

GINZA

銀座

The world-famous Ginza is mostly shopping, with branches of all major Japanese department stores, three of which - Mitsukoshi, Matsuya, Matsuzakaya - operate in one 4-block stretch of Chuo Dori. The sheer multiplicity of goods on display is dazzling: Godiva chocolate, Jantzen swimsuits, Moschino leather, Durban suits, Calvin Klein sportswear, Tiffany jewelry, Dior cosmetics - plus, of course, all the local producers and designers brands. The department stores also have fully-stocked gourmet supermarkets in their basements, often with free samples of, say, Swiss cheese or prosciutto.

All the department stores are open on Sunday, when Chuo Dori is closed to traffic and a festive air reign. Tables and chairs are placed in the middle of the street, interesting sidewalk bazaars are set up and fathers relax with families they rarely see on weekdays. It's the best time of the week to people-watch, and for a different kind of watching the colorful Kabuki Theater (Japan's most popular form of traditional drama) is a few minutes' walk from the main Ginza 4-chome crossing. If you would like to view a Kabuki performance, you can call the theater (03-5565-6000) for reservations in English.

For the visitor interested in "high-tech", the Sony Showroom displays Sony's latest home appliances and electronics, including a 120" High Definition TV (HDTV) demonstration screen. The showroom is open 1100 - 2000 daily (closed 1 Jan). Also in the area is the Nissan Gallery, where the latest models of Nissan cars are displayed. The library on the 2nd floor contains videos of cars. Nissan Gallery is open 1000 - 2000 daily (closed 1 & 2 Jan).
