

UENO PARK AND ZOO

UENO PARK is a stroll into history, culture and unsurpassed natural scenery. Ueno Park was the last stand of the devastated shogun armies, which fell to the Imperial forces in 1868. Shortly thereafter it became Tokyo's first city park. Trees, flowers and shrubs were sent from all over Japan to be planted at Ueno, and its manicured walks and tree-lined lanes are a favorite spot for many. Kaneiji Temple is also inside the park. During the Tokugawa regime, it was the most important Buddhist center in Edo, encompassing all the land that now form Ueno Park. The main hall, Kiyomizudo Hall and the Five Storied Pagoda are the only reminders of its former grandeur. Ueno is also a treasure trove of museums and the world famous Ueno Zoological Gardens.

The oldest and largest museum in Japan, the Tokyo National Museum houses the best collection of Japanese art and archeology in the world. Prior to World War II, it was known as the Imperial Household Museum. There are three main buildings. In the center is the main building for Japanese art. On the right is the Toyokan, a gallery containing an excellent collection of art and archeology primarily from China and Korea. The Kyokeikan, on the left, houses the Japanese archeological collections and early Buddhist objects. Also included is the Horyuji Treasure House, an impressive collection of early Japanese art from the Horyuji Temple in Nara presented to the Imperial Household in 1876. Most of the work is from the Asuka and Nara periods and includes Buddhist sculpture, masks, textiles, metal work and some paintings.

PLEASE NOTE: The Zoo and Museums are closed on Mondays and the day after a Japanese Holiday (usually open on Japanese holidays). They are also closed for the New Year holiday (from about 25 or 26 Dec. until 4 Jan.) You may ask Fleet and Family Service Center I & R Specialists to phone for definite dates.

While you are in the area, you may also want to explore the AMEYAYOKOCHO shopping district across from the train station at the foot of the hill. Famous for its hundreds of tiny discount shops and open air market, you can find a wide variety of goods, including larger sized clothing, leather, imported cheese and much more. There are also dozens of small, inexpensive restaurants in the area where you can make a good lunch of noodles, tempura, yakitori and many other specialties.
